Downtown Los Angeles has begun to build significant hospitality development projects based on the successes of the downtown core as well as changes coming to the LA Convention Center with the addition of a 1000-key hotel. New projects are bringing new opportunities and new interest to development of hotels in the area fueled by foreign investment and the arrival of a new level of brands into downtown. These changes have brought rise to many questions worth posing to a group of storied players in the LA market.
